

Dr. Clark and Nevada's Insane.

Dr. Clark, who had charge of Nevada's insane patients at his asylum in Stockton, resents the charge that he kept sane persons confined for the sake of the dollar a day paid him by this State for each patient. To a Stockton Mail reporter Dr. Clark said that there was one male patient whom he should have discharged three or four days before the Nevada patients were taken away, but he held him in order that the patient might take advantage of the half rate fare in going home to his friends in Nevada. There were other patients in the asylum who were subject to recurrent mania. They had rational spells at certain times of the month, and at other times were violently insane. It had been, and is now his practice, he said, to detain patients, with their consent, for four or five weeks after recovery, in order to make sure that there was no danger of a recurrence of the mania. The Virginia Chronicle says "this is very well as far as it goes, but the large number of patients discharged cured from the State Asylum at Reno since the unfortunates were transferred from Dr. Clark's institution gives ample foundation for suspicion that the charge which he resents is not groundless."

The prospects of the nomination of Folger to succeed Cornell, of New York, are considered by friends to have brightened considerably in the past week. One who sustains very confidential relations with the Secretary says that Folger will undoubtedly accept the nomination if it is tendered him. Conkling, who is undoubtedly an important factor in the coming contest, is regarded as decidedly more in favor of Folger than Wadsworth. He has never forgiven the latter for his action in 1878 when Wadsworth left the State House in Albany instead of voting with his Republican colleagues to make Mr. Conkling's election unanimous. Since the Senatorial fizzle following the resignation of Conkling and Platt, the breach between them and Cornell has widened to such an extent that it cannot be bridged over. Both would not support Folger, and especially since the President has signified his desire for such action. In the event of Folger's acceptance, it is stated that Representative Crowley, of New York, will succeed him as Secretary of the Treasury.

General James H. Ledlie, a well-known New York civil engineer, died in Staten Island on the 15th instant. He entered the Army of the Potomac as Major of the Nineteenth New York Volunteers, served four years and rose to the rank of Brigadier General. On returning from a trip to Europe, in 1879, he built the Nevada Central Railway. At the time of his death he was Chief Engineer and General Manager of the Santa Rosa and Sonoma Central Railroad in California and Chief Engineer of the Nevada Southern Railroad. General Ledlie was a member of the Military Order of the Royal Legion, and a Free Mason of a very high degree. He leaves a widow and two sons.

Information has been received of a contemplated trip through the United States by the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise and their suite. The distinguished party do not intend to visit this country, but will pass through it en route to British Columbia. They will cross the line at Detroit, going thence to Chicago and Omaha, and via the Pacific railroad to San Francisco. Arrangements are making to provide for the transfer of their baggage and their personal traveling effects through the United States.

Another railroad war has been inaugurated in the East, and passenger rates are being cut down. The fare from Chicago to Council Bluffs is now but $11, with the chances of going still lower. It is thought that this war may be the means of eventually reducing the fare to the Pacific Coast. It is to be hoped that it may, for this coast has never had the benefit of a railroad war, and the fare between Chicago and San Francisco is altogether higher than it should be. Let the battle go on!

The Pretzel.—This delicious food grows best in the shade, and the shade of a beer garden being preferred. It is ripe at birth, and is ready to eat as soon as it is picked. In North Germany, where the beighted people do not know any better, the pretzel is called a "kringle." This is enough to spoil the pretzel, only that is impossible. The pretzel is always planted on free-lunch counters. There is more nutrition in a barrel of sawdust than there is in a clothes basket full of pretzels. But then the pretzel is much the drier of the two. The genuine pretzel has a heart like a marble and the hide is varnished to keep it dry. It is varnished with hot lye, and sprinkled with salt and onion seed to give it tone.—[Bardette.]

The Young Men's Club. The Republicans of Reno are talking of forming a Republican Club, and a meeting will be called for that purpose probably some time next week. There is an abundance of material for a rousing club, and we hope they will organize at once. The coming campaign will be an exciting one, and it will be to their advantage to thoroughly organize. The following is from the pen of Rufe Shoemaker, one of the pioneer residents of Nevada county, Cal.: Speaking of the organization of a young men's Republican club at Nevada City he pronounces it "the correct thing to do," and then goes on to say:

When politics first started in this country young men did the management. There were very few old men to take their lead, not enough old ones to furnish officers for one club. About as bright and well managed a political convention as we ever saw in Nevada county was presided over by Henry Meredith, who was then about twenty-five years of age. Amos Laird was a member of it, and although he was then called "Uncle Amos" he was not an old man. George D. Roberts was one of that body, and Dennis Meagher was there as a young delegate from the Ridge part of the country. John T. Crenshaw, the Black Hawk of the Osage was one of the leaders of that body, if there were any leaders. We could name many other young men who stood back never, who took part in that convention. That convention nominated the writer of this, a youth of twenty-five years, for a county office, and he was elected too, beating a still younger man who has since been Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of a neighboring State and who now sits on the Supreme Court Bench of that State. In those days if young men had not run politics, politics would not have run. Chas. Kent, J. J. Dorsey, Wm. Lutzschneider, A. C. Niles, N. Seales, E. W. Roberts, Stephen Fenn of Omega and J. R. McDonnell, all were active men in politics—men who did their duty by taking part in the affairs of country were young men. Some of them are still active in politics, but upon our word they do not seem to us to be any more capable now of doing good political work than they were way back in the early 'fifty years. A. A. Sergeant and John I. Sykes were young and active political workers in those days, and we do not think they could do better now than then. A. B. Dibble could then talk for his side as well as he can to-day. Of course the men who took an active part in politics in the older times have gained (at least we hope they have) something of judgment and discretion since, but they have lost much of the vim and enthusiasm which belongs to the days of youth. Compensation is a grand law in all the affairs of this world. So we say to the young men. Organize your clubs and manage them yourselves. In such a matter too much leaning on the old politicians should not be done. Let the young associate themselves together in the party which they think is right, and then use every honorable and independent effort to secure success for that party. We do not know but that old politicians should apply to the young ones for advice and assistance more than the younger should apply to the older. In that event the old fellows might lose some of their knowledge of political tricks, which they have acquired in all these years, and which are not reputable and which are not good for the country, and learn instead something from the honesty and ingenuity of youth. Let the young men organize.

GAMBETTA'S MOTHER.—The mother of Gambetta could have desired no better ending; she lived to see her son the most famous man in France. She was, we are told, the mere spouse of a small grocer. She was a kind of Cornelia, reduced to the dimensions of our epoch. She was not content with bringing her son into the world; she formed his mind and character. It is to her that we owe the dictator, the tribune, the statesman, the founder of opportunity. She was the daughter of a druggist at Cahors, M. Massabie, whose shop was near the Genoese Bazaar, where M. Giuseppe Gambetta, the father of Leon, sold colonial produce and earthenware. He was but "an honest fellow" with his wife about him, loving his little profits and not over-scrupulous, it is said, as to how he got them, so long as he kept on the safe side of the law. Gambetta is, from first to last, the work of his mother, and it is to her that we owe the "Eagle of Cahors." Everything good in him, his patriotic dash, his independence of character, his love of authority, the solidity of his affections, comes to him from his French mother. He always recognized the debt; he had a veritable adoration for his mother, which sweetened her old age.

Party platforms have come to be such nameless things of late that it is refreshing to find for once a vigorous expression of opinion upon a live issue like the plank which the Kansas Republican Convention adopted last week heartily endorsing President Arthur's veto of the River and Harbor bill, and the action of United Kansas delegation in sustaining that veto. There are welcome signs also from other parts of the country that the public mind is properly aroused to the shameful action of Congress in overriding the veto, and that the Senators and Representatives involved are to be called to account. In Massachusetts it appears quite possible that the vote of Representative Oran on the wrong side will cost him the Republican nomination for Governor which previously seemed within his grasp, while Senator Hoar's championship of the "stew" has aroused a threatening opposition to his re-election which before was almost universally conceded. "Nothing since the back-pay grab has provoked the average voter as this 'big divide,' and the fate which met so many Congressmen involved in the scandal of 1874 is likely to overtake not a few who helped to carry through the River and Harbor job.—[Frank Leslie's.]

The Sinful Bang. The bang at last has fallen under the ban. From far away in the northern wilderness comes the voice of a brave ecclesiastic, pronouncing anathema upon the wearers of the unnatural ornament. There is a provoking vagueness in the report of the proclamation of the Bishop of Three Rivers, who is said to have "forbidden the ladies of his congregation to wear curls," but there can be little doubt that the word "curls" is here to be taken to include all and singular those ingenious constructions of curled hair and bandoline that decorate the foreheads of the daughters of America. It was an Anglican Bishop who some years ago refused to lay his hands upon false hair. The edict of the Bishop of Three Rivers does not appear to relate to any ecclesiastical ceremony, but to be directed against a particular mode of wearing one's own or some other person's hair, in church or out of church.

Probably we shall find that the ladies of the good Bishop's diocese are in the habit of going around with their hair done up in horrid little horns, and that his wrath is directed not so much against curls as against curl-papers. In this crusade he will have the most cordial support of every man. If there be anything more hideous, more subversive of Christian piety, than curl-papers, it is the resulting curls and waves, and anyone charged with the care of souls would be manifestly derelict if he had failed to raise his voice against them. The unfortunate part of it is that Three Rivers, while doubtless the abode of much beauty and virtue, has never been recognized as a centre of fashion, and hence the edict of its Bishop must be necessarily subordinate to those promulgated in the fashion magazines. If the Bishop had informed his flock that curls were no longer the thing, every woman of them would have come to church with hair plastered as smooth as bandoline could make it. They would then have known that to wear curls was a sin. But without such support the Bishop will hardly succeed in establishing at Three Rivers.—[Philadelphia Times.]

Once More on Deck Mr. R. Sadler is the first in the field for County Treasurer. Little need be said as to his merits, for he is well known as one of the most active business men in Nevada, and is in all respects a worthy and valuable citizen. Unfortunately he is not on the fence that will contain the crowing cock this fall. There is going to be a clean Republican sweep.—[Eureka Leader.]

Mrs. Garfield has received the silk dress presented to her by the Women's Silk-culture Association of Philadelphia, and has written to Mrs. John Lucas a letter in which she says: "The case of black silk sent to me by the United States Women's Silk-culture Association is received. It is very beautiful, and, as a specimen of our home product, is of exceeding interest. For this I prize it; but more especially is it of value to me that it was bestowed as an expression of the love and reverent regard felt for General Garfield. By him this industry was regarded with interest from the time it was established, and this, one of its first fruits, shall be preserved both as an heirloom and as a memorial."

We would recommend those who ask to see the results of Oscar Wilde's lectures in this country to visit Nantasket Beach, Boston's favorite watering-place, says an exchange. The houses there are being painted a bright yellow, and the window blinds a beautiful seal brown. One house displays painted sunflowers on the roofs, sides, and wherever, indeed, one of these aesthetic vegetable growths can be conveniently reproduced. Nantasket Beach wants one thing more. She wants a statue of the long-haired poet erected in some conspicuous situation.

In Germany the sofa is the seat of honor, and to omit offering its privileges to an invited guest is to condemn oneself as being ignorant of the usages of polite society. But a gentleman may not sit upon the sofa; to take a seat there uninvited is very presumptuous; and to ask even an intimate acquaintance to sit beside her on that sacred resting-place would be highly indecorous in a young lady. Such is the custom of the country.

TOWN AND COUNTY.

BREVITIES.

Everybody complains of the heat. Supt. Yerington and Train Dispatcher King, of the V. & T., were in town yesterday.

Miss Amy Head, a former resident of Reno, but now of San Francisco, is visiting Mrs. McFarland.

Dr. York did not lecture last evening at the Theater, but will lecture to-morrow and Sunday evenings.

R. Kirschbraun Jr. of Virginia, has just arrived here after a long trip through Oregon and returns home today.

Last Monday Dr. Hutchinson and wife, accompanied by the wife of Dr. Hutchins, departed on a camping tour to Genesee valley.

F. Boegle, the well known stationer late of Virginia, now of San Francisco, came through from the East on his way to the Comstock.

Professor Ring has accepted the principalship of the Winnemucca Public School, and will take charge on the first Monday in September.

Judge Blang, Judge T. H. Wells and Judge I. B. Marshall are the latest names mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination for Supreme Judge.

Rev. Dr. Palmer, pastor of the Congregational Church here, returned last evening with his family, and Mrs. Kimball, from a splendid camp tour up at the Lakes.

Has anything been done to prepare for the meeting of the Republican State Convention? The County Committee will, no doubt, do all that is necessary to be done in the matter.

The Republican County Central Committee will meet to-morrow to canvass and certify to the returns of the late primary election, and to make arrangements for the County Convention.

H. T. Cresswell is out for re-election as District Attorney of Lander. This insures W. C. Grimes, of Churchill, the Democratic nomination for Judge of the Fifth Judicial District. Judge D. C. McKenny will be renominated by the Republicans, and re-elected by the people.

The Grand Jury.

The District Court will be in session to-morrow when the Grand Jurors for the coming term will probably be selected. Many persons labor under the misapprehension that the drawing of the Grand Jury cannot take place before the first day of the term for which they serve. Such is not the case. The law directs that the jurors be selected within ten days before their term; the object being to have everything in running order, and the jurors present when the Court opens the term. The Grand Jurors are selected as many people hardly know, by the District Judge and one of the Commissioners, who each name turn about, one of the taxpayers of the county. The law was amended some years ago so that in case of the absence or illness of the Judge, the County Clerk takes his place in naming with the Commissioners.

A Quarrelsome Excursionist.
There was only one slight disturbance at the excursion Wednesday, and that was caused by a man who should have stayed at home. He evidently carried something stronger than water along with him, for on the porch of the Steamboat Hotel, he became violent and abusive, and pulling off his coat wanted to start in and clean out the entire house. His programme was promptly nipped in the bud by Constable Avery, who landed him off the platform and down onto the railroad track five feet below, whence he arose with a nearly broken back, a saddle and wiser excursionist. Beyond this little tiff, not a speck of any other disturbance occurred.

A Fine Header.
Yesterday afternoon a Walker Header passed through town and attracted much attention. As the name signifies, it merely cuts the heads off the wheat and carries them on a rolling conveyer into the header wagon, traveling alongside, instead of cutting close to the ground and binding the wheat into sheaves. Both headers and reapers have their advocates, and it was amusing yesterday afternoon to hear near the bridge, the owners of the different systems, arguing and all praising loudly the merits of their respective machines.

Heavy Trains.
Yesterday morning a train of fifty-four cars, passed westward over the C. P., and a few days ago, a train of twenty-four flat, loaded entirely with railroad iron for distribution along the line of the road, passed East.

Justice Young in a Dilemma.

The examination into the circumstances of the charge against Pete Murray, the small boy, who last week snatched seventy cents from the hand of Mrs. Baird's little five-year-old daughter, was continued the other afternoon by Judge Young in chambers. The testimony of other lads showed that Murray had displayed money to them on the same evening, after the occurrence. The boy at first stoutly denied having had any money, but being cornered finally acknowledged having had seventy cents. "But where did you get the seventy cents?" asked the Judge? After long hesitation Pete replied: "I won it from Nigger Henry on a dog fight." This caused a snicker to travel the rounds of the court, which the Bailiff suppressed by threatening to spank every offender. "But you must have seventy cents in the first place to put up as wager against Henry—where did you get that?" persisted the Justice. Peter couldn't stand this, and tearfully acknowledged having received seventy cents also from his mother. As Henry could not be found, the Court under penalty of the State Prison commanded each and every singular and personal witness connected with the case to appear before him at half-past six next evening, and under the penalties of hanging cautioned Peter to be very sure to grace the court room with his bare feet when he would be confronted with the little Baird girl and colored Henry. But while all the others were on hand quaking in their bare feet in the presence of the Laws Majesty, the eight-year-old defendant alone refused to obey the mandate of the Court, and though several of the youngsters were deputized to track him upon a detective capacity, he could not be found, and has kept very shady ever since. Mrs. Baird naturally feels indignant, for her little girl has been three times robbed on the street by the same boy. Judge Young is at a loss how to act in the matter; for while he would like to teach Pete a lesson, he cannot spank the youngster, and would not send him (a baby almost,) to jail. He has taken the matter under advisement for the present.

Capture of the Escape Near Lake Tahoe.

Dry before yesterday, Constable Avery received a dispatch from Guard J. M. Maheer of the State Prison, that he had captured the escaped convict G. H. Marsh, and requesting the Constable to meet him at the train yesterday morning. On the arrival of the train, a Journal reporter accompanied the officer to the Depot. Mr. Maheer stated that after the escape, he first got upon the warm track of the prisoner over near Washoe City, after losing a couple of days in blind search. Adopting the theory that Marsh would head for Truckee by way of Lake Tahoe, he went on by rail to Truckee, and finding no traces of him there, started up towards the Lake, and at a point about eight miles from Tahoe, met his man sturdily tramping it to Truckee, and picked him under arrest. The prisoner was inclined to have but little to say. He is a nice appearing young fellow, with a frank, open countenance, and looked quite genteel in the handsome suit of clothes he borrowed from the prison. After he escaped he crossed the mountains to the left of Mountain View, and following the eastern and northern shores of the lake, reached the Warm Springs. It took him from last Saturday afternoon till Wednesday morning to travel the forty miles from the prison to the point, eight miles from the lake, where he was captured. Sheriff Williams, of Douglas, asked him in the way he had run away. "To take a bath at the Warm Springs," Marsh sarcastically answered, showing the greatest aversion to being questioned. That silenced the Sheriff. Marsh was sent from Winnemucca for car robbery, and will have to serve his entire original sentence, besides whatever he may be sentenced for escaping. Maheer took him back yesterday in morning.

Two Married Hearts.

Judge Young last Wednesday evening united in marriage at the Lafayette House, O. R. Leete of Carson, and Emma Leete, arrived from the East. The couple were formerly husband and wife, but were divorced. A reconciliation was brought about, and now they are again embarked on the stormy sea of married felicity, on which their former experience will undoubtedly prove of great service to them. It will be recollected that Mr. Leete was the central figure of the shooting affray last Winter, at Duval's saloon, whereby Talbot got shot in the leg.

Accident to J. J. Holmes.

J. J. Holmes, chief of construction on the C. & C. R. R., is stopping at the Lake House on a temporary visit, with his daughters, Miss Maggie Holmes and Mrs. Fred Sickles. Mr. Holmes was lately severely injured by the premature explosion of a blast, and received severe injuries to his eyes, which have compelled him to lay off. Mr. Yerington arrived yesterday afternoon on a special train to pay a visit to him.

Wandering Stars and Traveling Artists.

Reno is at present receiving quite an influx of traveling artists, some of whom are very good in their specialties. One of them, an acrobat named Prescott, gave quite an entertainment on Virginia street Wednesday, in front of Nobby's Barzar. The crowd that now daily congregates in the neighborhood, busily discussing politics, were suddenly quite startled to see a young fellow gaudily arrayed in tights and spangles, bounce out into the middle of the street and quickly spread a carpet about six feet long. He then proceeded to talk quite rapidly and loudly. The audience were dumfounded at first, not knowing but the stranger might be some political candidate in disguise, about to reveal some of the secrets on the topics of politics. A few remarks showed, however, that he was only an acrobat, which he wisely acted like a true townsman and proceeded to take up a collection in advance. Then in a twinkling the street was cleared. By following his audience up, however, he raised three or four dollars, after which he did some tumbling and turning in excellent style, and kept his performance up quite a while.

At six o'clock last evening Prescott stretched a fine steel cable from the apex of the Palace building to the skylight on top of the theater; and after tightening it with a pulley and attaching guy ropes, stepped on the wire from the Palace building, with a heavy piece of gas pipe, twenty feet long and weighing nearly a hundred pounds, for a balance pole. He crossed the cable quite artistically in less than two minutes, though it swayed considerably. He would have given further exhibitions but for the small coin encouragement he received. He claims to have belonged to Robinson's circus but was accidentally left behind somewhere East, and does not now care to rejoin it.

Stealing an Invention.

About a year ago Judge Waldo, editor of the Times noticed the imperfect construction of the railroad trucks commonly used on all the railroad coaches. As long as a train travels on a straight piece of track, they act all right; but in turning a curve, especially a short one, there comes the rub. Trucks being rigid and the radius of the outer rail being greater, the wheels on that side have a peculiar grinding and hammering effect on the rail, grinding off particles and shreds from it, and tending towards crystallization both of it and the wheels. Mr. Waldo gave considerable thought to the subject, and in company with Mr. Julian drew up models and diagrams of an improved truck, which appeared to be just the desideratum. Some time after they were shown to a Civil Engineer who received permission to look them over at his leisure, and that has been the last seen of them; as the engineer suddenly departed East. A few months ago Mr. Waldo saw pass here six trucks, the exact pattern of his model, with a patent plastered on them; and he is of the opinion that they are the outcome of his ideas which the friendly engineer has used to his personal advantage. If such be the case, the question arises in the minds of many, whether Messrs. Waldo and Julian could not invalidate the patent, and secure for themselves the benefit of their invention. They laying the facts before the Patent Office.

An Original Notes.

Every day a diminutive Indian can be seen disporting himself on the apron of the dam, and diving down into the deep pool, made by the flow of water washing away the gravel. The little fellow takes many chances; for while the pool is about ten feet deep it is small in dimensions, and daily growing smaller. Some day there will be one little injun less among the Washoes. It is remarked too, as something very curious, that the latest crop of aborigines have light hair, blue eyes and rosy cheeks. Still nature is every day performing some wonderful freaks. The same phenomenon was noticed before the war broke the back bone of the good old slavery days.

On Sunday, the 13th instant, a Methodist minister from Reno held service at Hot Springs. There were about thirty Renosites in the congregation, which probably accounts for the reverend gentleman's presence at the lake. They returned to Reno Monday last.—Truckee Republican.
